"THE LITTLE DAGO,"

A Sawmill and Pleasure Boat Combined.

Things We Don't Know About Our Own Industries.

The Courier-Journal, of last Monday says: "Capt. J. S. Abraham and J. J. Dunn, United States Inspectors of Steamboats and BOLLERS, left yesterday for Hartford, Ky., to inspect one of the most peculiar boats navigating Kentucky waters—the Little Dago. It is a combination passenger, sawmill and tow-boat, and is operated on Rough river, very rarely leaving that stream. The craft is owned and operated by Capt. C. R. Robinson and would attract an unlimited amount of attention any place but upon the river it navigates.

"The Little Dago is scarcely eighty feet long and has twenty-four feet of beam, but in these small dimensions more work is done than on many of the larger boats which run on the Ohio and tributary rivers. The boat runs between Hartford and Falls of Rough, and at sparse intervals makes excursions into Green river. It was formerly built for a freight steamer, but the fact that Rough river is un-navigable for many months out of the year on account of low water and ice made it unprofitable, and a sawmill was soon installed on board. No sooner had this been put in operation, than an apparatus was purchased for the catching of floating logs and pulling them on board the boat and a similar piece of machinery purchased which is used to raise sunken timbers.

"The little boat takes on a load of freight and passengers and leaves port. Her engines are powerful, and they drive her through the water at a rapid rate of speed, and in this way there is nothing different from an ordinary steamer. A passenger who should happen to investigate the lower deck of the little craft, however, would find things vastly different, and if left alone for a few moments would soon be lost in the mazes of belts and shafts. On the freight deck instead of the usual piles of barrels, boxes and bales, is a miniature sawmill. This occupies the greater part of the deck, but in the interstices there is ample room to store the freight the boat carries. This generally consists of produce and groceries which are delivered at every farm, the owners always being at the river bank to receive their purchases which have been ordered during a former trip of the boat.

"During the progress of the boat the scene on the lower deck is one of thorough business and in spite of the cramped quarters the sawmill succeeds in turning out several thousand feet of lumber in a day. The progress is rapid and of little expense. As the boat traverses the shallow waters of Rough river the numerous floating logs which have broken from rafts, which nearly cover the surface of the stream at certain seasons, are captured by the apparatus on the bow and thrown on the forward deck. There they are soon jerked under the saw and are turned out on the larboard side in all sorts and sizes of rough sawed lumber. A small barge is always carried, and if the boat is going up stream this is turned loose when filled, and two men put aboard to pilot it to the mouth of Rough river, where Green river tow-boats take it to Evansville.

"Passengers are little bothered by the work which goes on uninterrupted on the lower deck, as the boat makes rapid progress and carries them to their destination in good time. During the summer season many excursion parties charter the boat, as the cabin deck is admirably arranged for dancing. During these trips the work does not pause and the song of the saw as it rips through great trees which have once adorned the hills of Ohio country joins with the music of the orchestra, and the belts and gearing, and exhausts of the engine keep time to the feet of the dancers."

The "Little Dago" is a small pleasure craft owned by a company of Hartford People and does not carry passengers, does not make trips to the Falls of Rough, has no sawmill on board and does not raise logs. We do not know how the above article came to be published, but it is about as true as the rest of the Courier-Journal.

BRADBURN WINS

The Circuit Judge-Ship in The Eighth Judicial District.

Bowling Green, Ky., June 23.—Special Judge J. J. Osborne, of Cinthiana, last Saturday decided the contest between Judge B. W. Bradburn and Judge John M. Galloway for the office of circuit judge in favor of Bradburn, the Democratic contestant. An appeal was granted.

Judge Osborne, in going over the case, said it had been elaborately prepared, but that, as he was forced to return home immediately, he could not render an exhaustive opinion. He handed down a briefly written judgment. The district (the eighth) is composed of the counties of Allen, Butler, Edmondson and Warren. The court held there was no interference in the Rally precinct in Allen county. In the Huntsville, Butler county, precinct he held that the election was so conducted as to destroy the secrecy of the ballot, and threw out that precinct.

Judge Osborne said the whole day at Bee Springs, Edmondson county, was a day of riot and drunkenness and that the crowd was headed by the sheriff and his deputies: that persons were driven from the polls and intimidated. It was held no election was conducted in this precinct. By Judge Osborne's decision Judge Galloway's vote was reduced four at Durbin Edmondson county.

In three of the Warren county precincts the election officers' certificate gave Bradburn 343 and Galloway 496, but the recount by the court changes the figures to 526 for Bradburn and 306 for Galloway.

According to the judgement entered Bradburn received a total of 7,140 votes and Galloway a total of 6,798. Bradburn was adjudged to have been entitled to the office and the emoluments since January 1, 1904. He was given a judgment for his cost and expenses.

Mystery Solved.

In building Alva Taylor's new undertakers shop it was necessary to tear down part of Riley's meat shop and underneath the roof was found a box nailed up tight. When the box was opened it was found to contain a basket, and in the basket was a suit of men's underclothing saturated with blood. How the box got there was a mystery and no one seemed to know anything about it, and it seemed as if though there had been foul play, until Monday evening Crave Peyton solved the mystery. They were the clothes of his half brother, Al Chinn, who was killed at the mines about two years ago, and he had the clothes here at the trial, and wishing to save them, had put them up there, thinking they would never be bothered. Thus the mysterious was made clear.

PHIL WHITE

Shoots and Kills Jim Edwards, in Hickman County.

Stories Differ From Self-Defense to Murder in Cold Blood.

Philip White, formerly of Hancock county, is in jail at Clinton, Ky., charged with murder. Last Saturday afternoon he killed a man named Jim Edwards at Oakton, Hickman county. The particulars of the killing are given in the following from the Mayfield Messenger:

"White was practically a stranger, having moved into the vicinity a few months ago from Hancock county. He and Edwards were neighbors and it seems that their children had been having trouble with one another. Saturday afternoon about 6 o'clock Edwards went to his well near the home of White, to draw a bucket of water and incidentally called White, to the door to converse with him. White came out and as he did so began shooting at Edwards. The first ball entered the heart of the victim, and he fell lifeless to the ground. White did not cease pulling the trigger but walked up to the body and fired three more shots. While Mrs. Edwards was tenderly pleading with the murderer to not kill her husband, it is said that White told her that if she opened her mouth she would receive the same treatment.

"White was immediately arrested and placed in the county jail at Clinton, where he now remains.

"The killing created much excitement in the vicinity where it took place, and it is reported that much indignation is felt against the man who did the killing."

White was born and reared about three miles from Lewisport and near the Davless county line. His father is Matt White, a highly respected citizen of Hancock county. "Phil" White was always a law-abiding young man, but possessed considerable temper, which caused him, in the recollection of those who knew him, to have several fights before he moved to Hickman county about two years ago.

Another account of the killing is taken from the Fulton Leader, which throws a different light on it:

"From reports here White had been trespassing upon Edwards' property it being a nearer way to town, and he had ordered him not to do so.

"Edwards, upon returning home Saturday morning, was told by his wife that White had been on her lot that day. Edwards exclaimed that he would kill White and upon over taking him charged upon him with a knife. White drew his revolver and shot his antagonist five times, instant death resulting. White was arrested and is being guarded until his trial comes up."

REPUBLICAN STAND.

For Forty Years the Party Has Made the Tariff One of its Main Principles.

Republican platforms for the past forty-four years have been framed by many of the most prominent men of the party, but the debates indicate that the custom of having the chairman draft the platform was less prevalent than it is now.

Since 1860 the tariff plank and the declarations on reciprocity have been as follows:

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1860.

That, while providing revenue for the support of the general Government, by duties upon imports, sound policy requires such an adjustment of those imports as to encourage the development of the industrial interests on the whole country; and we recommend the policy of National exchanges, which secures to the workingman liberal wages, to agriculture, remunerating prices, to mechanics and manufactures an adequate reward for their skill, labor and dexterity, and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence.

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1868.

It is due to the labor of the nation that tax should be equalized and reduced as rapidly as national faith will permit.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION OF 1872.

The annual revenue, after paying current expenditures, pensions and interest on the public debt should furnish a moderate balance for the reduction of the principal, and that the revenue, except so much as may be derived from a tax on tobacco and liquors, should be raised by duties upon imports, the details of which should be so adjusted as to aid in securing remunerative wages to labor, and promote the industries, prosperity and growth of the country.

CINCINNATI CONVENTION OF 1876.

The revenue necessary for current expenditures and obligations of the public debt must be largely derived from duties upon importations, which as far as possible, should be so adjusted as to promote the interests of the American labor and advance the prosperity of the whole country.

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1880.

We affirm the belief, avowed in 1876, that the duties levied for the purpose of revenue should so discriminate as to favor American labor.

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1884.

The largest diversity of industry is most productive of general prosperity, and the comfort and independence of the people.

We therefore demand that the imposition of duties on foreign imports shall be made, not "for revenue only," but that in raising the requisite revenues for the Government, such duties shall be levied as to afford security to our diversified industries and protection to the rights and wages of the laborer, to the end that active and intelligent labor, as well as capital, may have its just reward, and the laboring man his full share in the national prosperity.

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1888.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection. We protest against its destructions as proposed by the President of his party. They serve the interest of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue and confidence appeal to the people for their judgment. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests, except those of the usurer and the Sheriff. We denounce the Mills bill as destructive to the general business, the labor and farming interests of the country, and we heartily endorse the consistent and patriotic action of the Republican representatives in Congress in opposing its passage.

MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION OF 1892.

We reaffirm the American doctrine of protection. We call attention to its growth abroad. We maintain that the prosperous condition of our country is largely due to the wise revenue legislation of the Republican Congress.

We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States, except luxuries, should be admitted free of duty, and that on all imports, coming into competition with the products of American labor, there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home. We assert that the price of manufactured articles of general consumption have been reduced under the operations of the tariff act of 1890.

We point to the success of the Republican policy of reciprocity under which our export trade has vastly increased, and new and enlarged markets have been opened for the products of our farms and work shops.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION OF 1896.

We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of America industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy taxes foreign products and encourages home industries. It puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer. It upholds the American standard of wages for the American workingman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American farmer less dependent upon foreign demand and prices; it diffuses general thrift and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its reasonable application it is just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, sectional discriminations and individual favoritism.

Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of American policy, and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has struck down both, and both must be re-established.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION OF 1900.

We renew our faith in the policy of protection to American labor. In that policy our industries have been established, diversified and maintained. By protecting the home market competition has been stimulated and production cheapened. Opportunity to the inventive genius of our people has been secured, and wages in every department of labor maintained at a high rate, higher now than ever before, and always distinguishing our working people in their better conditions of life from those of any competing country. Enjoying the blessing of the American common school, secure in the right of self-government and protected in the occupancy of their own market, their constantly increasing knowledge and skill have enabled them to finally enter the market of the world. We favor the associated policy of reciprocity so directed as to open out markets on favorable terms for what we do not ourselves produce in return for free foreign

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION.—PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.
Mrs. Eva Bartho, 123 East 12th street, New York City, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

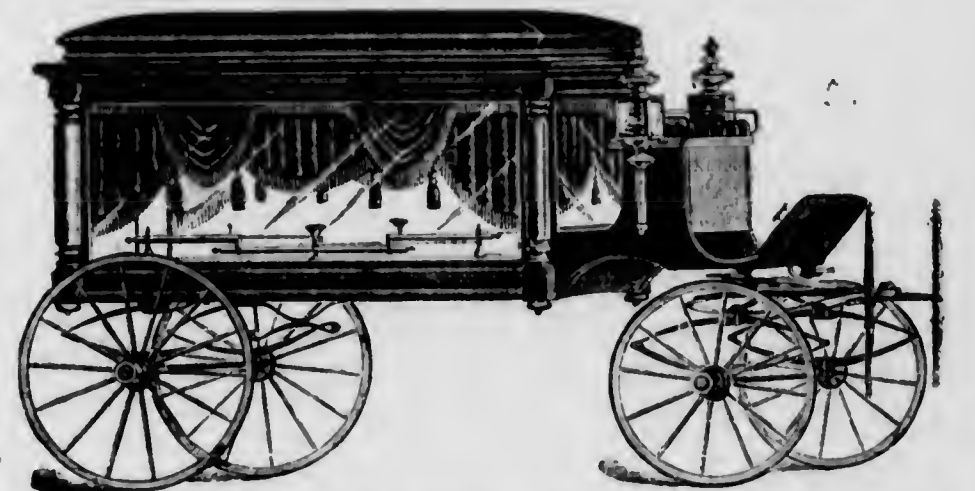

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

CHICAGO CONVENTION OF 1904.

Protection which guards and develops our industries is a cardinal policy of the Republican party. The measure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. We insist upon the maintenance of the principles of protection, and, therefore, rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that public interest demands alteration, but this work cannot solely be committed to any other hands than the Republican party. To intrust it to the Democratic party is to invite disaster.

Whether, as in 1892, the Democratic party declared the protective tariff unconstitutional, or whether it demands tariff reform or tariff revision, its real object is always the destruction of the protective system. However specious the name, the purpose is ever the same. A Democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity; a Republican tariff by business prosperity.

MONEY RETURNED.

Claude Beeler Recovers Twenty-Five Dollars

After the Finder Had it a Year—
Story of a Young Man's Struggle to be Honest.

(Rockport, Ind., Journal.)

Claude Beeler, living near Silverdale, recovered last week a pocket book containing nearly twenty-five dollars that he had lost a year before and had long ago given up. The prickings of conscience would not quiet and the finder returned it to make peace with himself. Here is the story of the loss and recovery of the money.

Last June, while Mr. Beeler was hauling crushed rock for construction of the macadamized road leading to Silverdale his purse slipped from his pocket in some way and was lost on the road. Diligent search was made but no trace of the missing money. An advertisement was inserted in the Journal which brought no reply and Mr. Beeler gave it up as lost thinking that perhaps the purse had been buried underneath a load of rock somewhere along the road. This was the end of the search. About seven o'clock on Tuesday evening of last week Mr. Beeler, who was sitting in a room at his home visible from the highway, heard someone exclaim outside, "Yes that's the man sitting in there." A knock brought him to the door and he ushered in two men both strangers, and one very young.

The visitors introduced themselves and after a little conversation the young man said:

"Mr. Beeler, you lost a pocket book, didn't you?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Beeler, "I did about a year ago while I was hauling rock but I have never heard of it."

"Well I found it," said the young man frankly, and with some show of eagerness, "and I have been wanting to give it back for months, but have been away and have had no chance. Here's a clean breast of the matter, something that has worried me awfully."

"My home is not in this part of the county as I live near the border, but last spring after I had completed the common schools I wanted to get money to go away to school and being poor came to Rockport to work. The day you lost your pocket book I was near Power's corner and found it lying in the road. Thrusting it into my pocket before anyone could see me I thought what a great help it would be to me in going to school."

"Shortly after you came along inquiring if anyone had found the money. My heart leaped into my mouth and beat fiercely for some one would accuse me. You passed me but the image of the light complexion man with a dark team of horses has haunted me continually and I would have known you any where from the memory of that meeting. When we arrived here in front of your house I told this man that there you were."

"I hardly seemed to realize my crime but when fall came I went away to school. A great revival was in progress in the town. I became repentant and joined the church. Then the weight of this sin grew intolerable. I must pay it back, so I worked mornings and evenings and saved the money, determined that the first thing for me to do on getting back in this country would be to hunt you out and make amends. Here is the twenty-five dollars, though I feel I owe you more."

Mr. Beeler was taken aback with surprise but urged that the young man accept five dollars as a reward. This he at first refused to do, but finally, on being pressed to take it and use it in the good cause of his education took the reward. Thus was stilled the "wee wee" voice and the young man went away light-hearted, as if from under a heavy load.

Attempted Suicide.

The Morgantown Republican, of June 16, says: The youngest suicide on record was attempted here last Tuesday week when Harry Bratton, a little colored boy, eight-years old, the son of Oscar Bratton, living below town, made two unsuccessful attempts to end his earthly career. The first attempt was in an orchard when he climbed up in a tree and tried his suspenders round his neck and swung off, but was taken down by his playmate.

The second attempt which came very near being successful was near Odom's blacksmith shop, when he again fastened his suspenders about his neck and jumped off the fence. This time he was taken down by blacksmith John Galloway, who took him down and gave him a spanking and reported the matter to his mother, who gave him a gentle flogging.

The motive of the young suicide has not been learned, but it may be that he is crossed in love or it may be the bad fruit from the example chronicled in week before last issue. However Harry is still in the flesh and was up on the streets just after the attempt to hang himself hunting for some one to play "dinks" with him, but he don't like to talk about the matter.

Triumphs of Modern Surgery

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back or they are removed entirely, bones are spliced; pipe stake the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic and dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and is one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and, when applied to such injuries causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which most injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

Queen Mary's Harp is Sold.

There was dispersed by auction in Edinburgh on Saturday a family collection of Stuart and Jacobite relics of great historic interests and value. The early death of J. N. Durrant, Stuart, the twentieth and last laird of Dalguise, in Perthshire, brought this unique collection to the hammer. Interest centered mainly on two ancient harps, one known as Queen Mary's harp and the other as the Lamont or as the Caledonian harp. For the last twenty years they have reposed at the National Museum of Antiquities, and are well known to Scottish antiquaries.

The story of Queen Mary's harp is that during a hunting trip into the highlands of Perthshire, in the year 1563, she offered her own harp as a prize in a bardic competition. It was awarded to Miss Beatrice Gurdyn, of Banchory. It closely resembles the famous harp of Brian Boru, and a century ago it was strung and found to possess a sweet and delicate tone. Competition for it was very keen. Theodore Napier, the well-known Jacobite enthusiast, remained in the bidding until £840 was reached, and finally, at £892 10s., it was secured by the authorities of the Edinburgh Antiquarian Museum. The Lamont harp, which dates from the Eleventh or Twelfth century, was sold at £525. A lock of hair from Prince Charles' head, and another from that of his wife, Princess Louise of Stolberg, went for £33 12s. A sword which he had worn was sold for £78. Highland dirks went at from £11 to £15 each, an Andrea Ferrara sword at £25 and two genuine old Highland targets at £58 16s and £60 18s.

No Competition.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the relief and cure of bowel complaints both in children and adults has brought it into almost universal use, so that it is practically without a rival and as every one who has used it knows, is without an equal. For sale by all druggists.

The "Other Day."

Mr. M. H. Vreeland, president of the Metropolitan Street Railroad Company, was coming over to New York on the Long Island ferry recently and encountered the crowds of people returning to the city from the race track. The boat was so filled that Mr. Vreeland was compelled to stand outside, and he heard the following conversation between two colored gentlemen, who had, evidently not seen each other for some time: "Say, Mr. Jackson, yo' suitin' surprise yo' frien's by yo' prosperity. Yo' wear such fine clothes, an' somebody tole yo' 'ways got money." "Oh, I plays de races, Johnson." "Well, I always hear dat people dat plays de races win one day an loose de nex'." "Yes, dat's right; but I only go down every other day."

THE PHILIPPINES.

Our Recent Possessions As Viewed by Foreign Observers.

Is there any American nowadays, any average American, I mean, who thinks, writes, or speaks about the Philippines? Are Americans, as a whole, following with anything but the most spasmodic and superficial interest the progress of their apprenticeship in the government of subject aliens? Have they any clear idea of what work it is that is being done in their name out in that Far-Eastern archipelago, of the principles and policy that direct it, of the results it has produced, of the problems that are still to be faced? I suspect—at a distance of three thousand miles one cannot know what—that the Philippines no longer hold American attention, that other questions and other interests have crowded them out, and that if you were to ask the man in the cars for a simple survey of conditions in the archipelago you would find him a whole encyclopaedia of cloudy misinformation. I suspect this to be the case because English analogy points towards it, because the ordinary Englishman, though an imperialist to the backbone, known next to nothing to the empire, and because the masses in any country that own and rules dependencies content themselves with a vague pride of ownership and go not aspire to any detailed acquaintance with actualities.

To foreign observers the great danger ahead of Americans in the Philippines has from the first appeared to be their love of phrases, their profound belief in democracy as a cure for all ills, their convictions that salvation is to be found only in the American influence brought to bear on them and the control exercised by the civil governor and white officials. More and more control being found necessary, sham autonomy has led step by step to an extraordinary degree of centralization, in which everything is referred to the Governor. The results is a weak paternal regime and an infinite multiplication of bureaus that consume a vast quantity of stationary with little practical issue. "It is possible that the American capacity for pushing things through may enable them to surmount the red-tape barriers and do some really practical work in the Philippines; but the unique opportunity that had for teaching the Latin Malays a lesson in doing, as opposed to talking, is irretrievably lost." That is the fundamental error of the American policy in the Philippines.

Portland, Maine, Oct. 17, 1904.
I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came and God send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Misadventure of "Dennis."

Capt. Eugene H. C. Leutze, U. S. N., commander of the battleship Maine, has German blood in his veins and vast knowledge of detail about naval ordinance in his head. Before he was given the Maine and last went to sea he was superintendent of the gun factory at the Washington Navy Yard, and gained the reputation of being a strict taskmaster.

Habitually an "early to bed early to rise" man, Capt. Leutze found himself unable to sleep one night. He arose, dressed, left his quarters and walked down to one of the gunshops. Although three shifts are needed to dispose of the great press of work now on hands, there was little doing.

Capt. Leutze's sharp eye detected a machine sitting on the carriage of a great lathe, which was slowly running to and fro, taking almost infinitesimal threads of steel from a twelve-inch gun. He was dozing, oblivious to all surroundings, when Capt. Leutze reached his side and aroused him with:

"Well, what are you doing, and what's your name?"

The craftsman looked up and quailed. Then, with a resigned air, he pined:

"Well, I guess it's Dennis."

He was not discharged.

No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

PROMINENT ACTRESS,

Because of the Indian Blood
in Her Veins.

Secure a Valuable Six-Hundred Acre Mineral Land Allotment.

Miss Jessie Mae Hill, formerly the wife of Mark Shaw, of this city, and who has appeared before Rockport audience several times, has secured some government land recently because of the fact that she is of Indian descent. The story is told as follows in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of Monday.

"A romance that has come down through several centuries has recently developed as the result of the Dawes commission awarding allotments of noble land to two St.
Louis women, both of whom have won distinction on the stage in recent years—Misses Jessie Mae Hill and French Hill.

It was necessary in the cases of the Misses Hill to trace their ancestry sufficiently to an Indian parent.
The romance that has developed because of their great-great-grandfather's American, as a French soldier, making the trip, like Hill and French Hill, to locate a parcel of land.

Thomas Hill was a member of a wealthy and noble French family. His health failed only in his life, and the trip to America was advised by physicians and was agreed to by the noble parent.
He came with a view of returning to France after a few months, but a beautiful Cherokee maiden interrupted his plans. He went on to her married and eventually lived in America with his Indian wife and children. Through French Hill he had settled into Georgia, and there met the Cherokee girl, whose blood still courses sufficiently in the veins of these two St. Louis young women to entitle them equal rights with the full-blooded tribesmen of today.

The ancestry was traced directly by the Dawes commission, and upon their investigation of the alleged rights of the Misses Hill was established their title to the land. They have 600 acres of valuable land as is included in the domain of the five tribes, some of their holdings lying within sight of Bartlesville, the recently famed oil and gas field. Much of their land is mineral and of untold value. The young woman are but one sixteenth Indian blood."

An Alarm Clock for 25c.

If you want to get up early and feel well all day take a Little Early Riser or two at bed time. These famous little pills relax the nerves,
give quiet rest and refreshing sleep
with a gentle movement of the bowels about breakfast time. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says "Early Risers are the best pill made for constipation, sick headache, biliousness, etc." Sold by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro.

One on Dr. Mitchell.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, the eminent nerve specialist, of Philadelphia, tells of an incident of his early career which taught him a lesson he has always remembered. Every since then there has been one question which he never asked his patients. An elderly man was ushered into the doctor's office one afternoon. After telling him to be seated, the doctor asked him in his mildest manner.

"Well, sir, what is the matter with you?"

The patient quickly replied: "If I knew, doctor, I would not come here
to find out."

For a Hundred Years.

For a hundred years or more Witch Hazel has been recognized as a superior remedy, but it remained for F. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, to discover how to combine the virtues of Witch Hazel with other an-tiseptics in the form of a salve. De-Witt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve in the world for sores, cuts, burns, bruises and piles. The high standing of this salve has given rise to counterfeits, and the public is advised to look for the name "DeWitt"
on the package, and accept no other.

Eulogy Under Difficulties.

A well-known minister is telling an anecdote about a brother clergyman who was required unexpectedly

"I lost courage and thought I would never regain my health."
"Three years of delicate health trying doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines" without benefit might well sap the courage of any woman. And yet Mrs. Bryant proved that the question of the cure of womanly disease is only a question of using the right remedy. A few doses of "Favorite Prescription" restored
her courage and revived her hope, because she could see "a decided change from the first." Three months' use of the medicine restored her to perfect health.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
cures irregularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Sarah Bryant, President of Memphis
Social Science Club, residing at 271 Atkinson Ave., Memphis, Tenn., writes: "I suffered with delicate health for three years, trying doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines until I lost courage and thought I would never regain my health. But a few doses of your 'Favorite Prescription' made me change my mind. Could see a decided change from the first, and I kept on taking it for three months faithfully and am now in perfect health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V.
Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

to officiate at the funeral of a man concerning whom he knew nothing.
When he arrived at the town where the deceased had lived he had just time to make a few inquiries about his traits and achievements, the results of which he noted on a memorandum. His eulogy at the service, as reported, was about as follows:

"Our dear brother, whom we mourn
to-day, was a man of rare character and ability. He had the mental capacity of a '—' referring to his notes—
'Daniel Webster, the lack of a'— again consulting his memorandum—
'Henry Clay; the pertinacity of a'— another reference—'Ulysses S. Grant.
We can only mourn him with a profound and sorrowful regret now that he has gone to meet his'—another reference to the notes—'God.'"

A Strong Heart

Is assured by perfect digestion. Indigestion swells the stomach and pulls it up against the heart. This causes relieves the stomach, takes the strain off the heart and restores it to a full performance of its functions naturally.

The Value of a Side Remark.

A. S. L. Shields, Philadelphia's well-known criminal lawyer, once turned a case in his favor by the happy inspiration of a side remark.

Geo. S. Graham, then District Attorney of the Quaker City, was making his plea to the jury. Suddenly pointing to the prisoner he shouted:
"He has been in politics too long to be honest."

He paused for a moment to let the full significance of the words sink home, when, in a quiet, but penetrating voice, Mr. Shields, leaning towards the speaker, said:

"You've been in politics some little time yourself, haven't you George?"

The jury shook with laughter, Mr.
Graham sat down discomfited, and a few minutes later the twelve good men and true brought in a verdict of not guilty.

KILLING FOR FUN.

Emperor of Germany Kills Thousands of Wild Beasts
for Fun.

[Medical Talk.]

The Emperor of Germany has killed thousands and thousands of dumb creatures for the fun of killing. Probably he never shot an animal because it was dangerous or because he needed it for food. Most of the wild beasts that he has killed were caught and caged on purpose to furnish the Emperor amusement in killing them.

These creatures are kept in parks
and large enclosures at great expense.
Then on certain important occasions they are let out, one by one, while the Emperor stands nearby, at a convenient distance, to shoot them and see them fall dead—with a gun that he had no part in contriving, with good ammunition which he took no part in earning, with wild beasts as his victims that never did him any harm or is there liability that they will do any one else harm.

This Emperor kills for the fun of killing, shoots for the amusement of destroying life which he can never give back. What gruesome sport!
What heartless recreation!

His majesty, the king of England, is a close second to the Emperor of Germany. He also kills for sport.
Birds, beasts, innocent creatures throbbed with life, with just as good a right to live as the king himself.
Beasts with paternal and maternal instincts, Brutes capable of the kindliest feeling and the most devoted service. He has killed them by the score for no offense, and for no rational purpose. Just simply for the fun of it.

Ex-President Cleveland is also a killer for the fun of it. His specialty is wild ducks. He does not need them to eat for he is a rich man.
These wild ducks are doing him no harm. Beautiful, innocent creatures enjoying the life that God has given them. He kills them for the sport of killing them. Not quite so bad as if somebody had caught them for him. He at least hunts them in their haunts and shoots them at a time when escape is not altogether impossible.

But, surely, even this is not a manly sport. It does not exhibit even that quality of courage that the ducks themselves are capable of.

Some day the world will be ashamed that its rulers were men who thought it royal pastime to spill innocent blood, to end the earthly existence of creatures whose physical structure and mental habits so nearly resemble the human species.

Think Over it.

Within eight months we have received enough immigrants from Europe to repeople Ireland.

It is easy enough to know how to talk. But it is another matter to know when to talk.

Discontent is the want of self-reliance. It is infirmity of will.

To be happy is not to possess much but to hope and love much.

Blessings come home to roost just as surely as curses.

Many a woman's love is lost by taking to much for granted.

The possibilities in my life are much greater than we imagine.

He Never Saves the Band.

When King Edward smokes a cigar the bands are religiously torn into four pieces every time. The reason is that once, at Marlborough, it came to the ear of the royal cigars, which was stamped with the royal arms, had been sold by an indiscreet waiter for five guineas. The man who bought it attached the band to a similarly-made cigar, and went round showing the cigar to his friend saying it had been given to him by the King.

is by far the largest importing nation in Europe. The most remarkable feature of England's trade with the world is the immense preponderance of trade carried on with the United States. During 1903 Great Britain bought from the United States more than $80,000,000 worth of our products, and this Anglo-American trade is by far the largest trade between any two countries on earth. The amount named exceeds by more than a half a billion dollars the value of imports from the next largest seller, namely, France. Thus at the outset it is not hard to understand that with the output of our plantations, farms, ranches and dairies, and with the products of our mills and factories we feed, clothe and shelter and provide the comforts and necessities generally,
for the people of Great Britain.

Couldn't Teach Him Economy.

A man in Henderson county who thought his son extravagant had a rich neighbor who was very stingy.
One evening before supper he sent the boy over to the stingy old man with a note asking him to keep the son and teach him economy. The note was read to the boy.

The boy and the miser had a meager supper, after which they sat talking for a few minutes. Then the old man covered the fire and blew out the light and continued the conversation in the dark.

Presently the old man heard the boy moving around and inquired what he was doing.

"Taking off my clothes," said the boy.

"What for? Are you going to bed?" asked the miser.

"O, no; just keep from wearing them on!"

In the morning the old man sent the boy back to his father with a note saying he could "teach him nothing in the way of economy!"

One on Cannon.

At the Republican State convention
in Springfield, Ill., Senator Cullom and Speaker Cannon tried to get a popular ruling as to which is the handsomer man.

"If I had a face like yours, Joe,"
I'd wear a veil or build a fence around it."

"And if I looked like you Shelby," replied "Uncle Joe," "I'd walk backward all the time. Your rear elevation isn't so bad, but the front facade is a bad batch."

"I'll tell you Joe, we'll leave it to this little girl. She doesn't want any political job, and I guess she'll be honest," suggested Senator Cullom.

The little girl's mother was with her. "Which do you think is the best looking, Dorothy?" asked the proud mother.

The child looked at both out of big,
frank eyes and said:

"I don't like to say, mamma, which I like best. I might offend Mr. Cannon."

The Wretch.

"And you want a divorce on the ground of willful neglect of duty?" Inquired the Judge.

"Yes, your Honor," replied the blushing young lady.

"Well, now, tell me the plain facts in the case. What did you do."

"We were guests at a house party at the country place of some of our friends last week, and he insisted on staying out of game every night and refusing to pay my losses to our host and hostess when we went away."

Hush Money.

At the Democratic State Convention held in Albany a few weeks ago
Mr. David B. Hill was busy every moment of the day. Towards evening he thought he would secure a few moments' respite and a little rest while being shaved. As he climbed into the barber's chair he handed the tonsorial artist a quarter of a dollar.
"Is this a tip, sir?" inquired the night of the shears.

"No," replied Mr. Hill, "that's hush money. Now, not a word!"

"Remember this," said the primary school teacher: "A plural subject takes a plural verb—a girl is, a boy is; girl are boys are; Now, do you under-sent. "Well then, who will give a sentence with girls in the plural?"

this time only one little girl: "I can give a sentence: 'Girls, are my hat

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which falls of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, putting it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.
Mr. D. Kumble, of Nevada, O., says: "I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me."

THE ROMANCE OF A PIRATE'S DAUGHTER

CHAPTER XXVIII.

MR. DELAPLAINE LEADS A BOARDING PARTY.

STEADILY southward sailed the brig Black Swan which bore upon its decks the happy Mander family and our friend Dickory.

The sackcloth draperies of Lucilla, with the red cord lightly tied about them, had given place to a very ordinary gown fashioned by her mother and herself, which added so few charms to her young face and sparkling eyes that Dickory often thought that he wished there were some bushes on deck so that she might stand behind them and let him see only her face, as he had seen it when first he met her. But he saw the pretty face a great deal, for Lucilla was very anxious to know things, and asked many questions about Barbadoes, and also asked if there was any probability that the brig would go straight on to that lovely island without bothering to stop at Jamaica.

Our young friend still wore the nautical uniform, although in coming on the brig he had changed it for some rough sailor's clothes. But Lucilla had besought him to be again a brave lieutenant.

David was at the wheel and Mander stood near him. These old friends had not yet finished talking about what had happened in the days since they had seen each other. Mrs. Mander sat, not far away, still making clothes, and little Lena was helping her in her childlike way. Lucilla and Dickory were still talking about Barbadoes. There never was a girl who wanted to know so much about an island as that girl wanted to know about Barbadoes.

Suddenly there was a shout from above.

"What's that?" asked Mander. "A sail," said David, peering out over the sea but able to see nothing. Lucilla and Dickory did not cease talking. At that moment Lucilla did not care greatly about sails, there was so much to be said about Barbadoes.

There was a good deal of talking forward, and after awhile the captain walked to the quarter-deck. He was a gruff man and his face was troubled. "I am sorry to say," he growled, "that the ship we have sighted is a pirate; she flies the black flag."

Now there was no more talk about the Barbadoes, or what had happened to old friends, and the sewing dropped on the deck. Those poor Manders were chilled to the soul. Were they again to be taken by pirates?

TO THE SURPRISE OF THE PEOPLE ON THE BLACK SWAN, THERE CAME NO SHOT FROM THE APPROACHING PIRATE.

"Captain," cried Mander, "what can we do, can we run away from them?"

"We could not run away from them," growled the captain, "and there is nothing to do. They intend to take this brig, and that's the reason they have run up their skull and bones. They are bearing directly down upon us with a fair wind; they will be firing a gun presently, and then I shall lay to and wait for them."

To the surprise of the people on the Black Swan there came no shot from the approaching pirate; but as she still bore down upon them, running before the wind, the captain of the brig lay to and lowered his flag. Submission now was all that was before them. No man on the brig took up arms, nor did the crew form themselves into any show of resistance; that would have hurt matters worse.

As the pirate vessel came on, nearer and nearer, a great number of men could be seen stretched along her deck and some brass cannon were visible trained upon the unfortunate brig.

But, to the surprise of the captain of the Black Swan, and of nearly everybody on board of her, the pirate did not run down upon her to make fast and board. Instead of that she put about into the wind and lay to less than a quarter of a mile away. Then two boats were lowered and filled with men, who rowed towards the brig.

"They have special reasons for our capture," said the captain to those who were crowded about him; "he may be well laden now with plunder, and comes to us for our gold and silver. Or it may be that he merely wants the brig. If that be so, he can quickly rid himself of us."

That was a cruel speech when women had to hear it, but the captain was a rough fellow.

The boats came on as quietly as if they were about to land at a neighboring pier. Dickory and Lucilla cautiously peeped over the rail, Dickory without his hat, and Lucilla, hiding herself, all but a part of her face, behind him; the Manders crouched together on the deck, the father with glaring eyes and a knife in his hand. The crew stood with their hats removed and their clins lowered, waiting for what might happen next.

The boats neared the ship and were soon made fast; every help was offered by the crew of the brig, and not a sign of resistance was shown. The leader of the pirates mounted to the deck, followed by the greater part of his men.

For a moment Capt. Ichabod glanced about him, and then, addressing the captain of the brig he said: "This is all very well. I am glad to see that you have sense enough to take things as you find them and not stir up a fracas and make trouble. I overhauled you that I might lay in a stock of provisions, and some wine and spirits besides, having no desire, if you treat us right, to despoil you further. So, if you will set your men to work to get on deck such stores as my quartermaster here may demand of you, we shall get through this business quickly. In the meantime, lower two or three boats, so that your men can row the goods over to my vessel."

The captain of the Black Swan simply bowed his head and turned away to obey orders, while Capt. Ichabod stepped aft and began to survey the captured vessel. As soon as his back was turned, the captain of the brig was approached by a very respectable elderly gentleman, apparently not engaged either in mercantile marine or in piratical pursuits, who stopped him and said: "Sir, my name is Felix Delaplaine, merchant, of Spanish Town, Jamaica. I am, against my will, engaged in this piratical attack upon your vessel, but I wish to assure you privately that I will not consent to have you robbed of your property, and that, although some of your provisions may be taken by these pirates, I here promise, as an honorable gentleman, to pay you the full value of all that they seize upon."

The captain of the Black Swan had no opportunity to make an answer to this most extraordinary statement, for at that moment a naval officer, shouting at the top of his voice, came rushing towards the respectable gentleman who had just been making such honorable proposals. Almost at the same moment there was a great shout from Capt. Ichabod, who, drawing his cutlass from its sheath, raised the glittering blade and dashed in pursuit of the naval gentleman.

"Hold there! Hold there!" cried the pirate. "Don't you touch him; don't lay your hand upon him!"

But Ichabod was not quick enough. Dickory, swift as a stag, stretched out both his arms and threw them around the neck of the amazed Mr. Delaplaine.

Now the pirate Ichabod reached the two; his great sword went high in air, and was about to descend upon the naval person, whoever he was, who had made such an unprovoked attack upon his honored passenger, when his arm was caught by some one from behind. Turning, with a great curse, his eyes fell upon the face of a young girl.

"Oh, don't kill him! Don't kill him!" she cried, "he will hurt nobody; he is only hugging the old gentleman."

Capt. Ichabod looked from the girl to the two men, who were actually embracing each other. Dickory's back was towards him, but the face of Mr. Delaplaine fairly glowed with delight.

"Oh!" said Ichabod, turning to Lucilla, "and what does this mean, be-dad?"

"I don't know," she answered, "but the gentleman in the uniform is a good man. Perhaps the other one is his father."

"To my eyes," said Capt. Ichabod, "this is a most fearsome mix."

The Mander family, and nearly everybody else on board, crowded about the little group, gazing with all their eyes, but asking no questions.

"Capt. Ichabod," exclaimed Mr. Delaplaine, holding Dickory by the hand, "this is one of the two persons you were taking us to find. This is Dickory Charter, the son of good Dame Charter, now on your vessel. He went away with Blackbeard, and we were in search of him."

"Oh!" cried Capt. Ichabod, "by my life I believe it. That's the young fellow that Blackbeard dressed up in a cocked hat and took away with him."

"I am the same person, sir," said Dickory.

"So far so good," said Capt. Ichabod. "I am very glad that I did not bring down my cutlass on you, which I should have done, be-dad, had it not been for this young woman."

Now up spoke Mr. Delaplaine. "We have found you, Dickory," he cried, "but what can you tell us of Maj. Bonnet?"

"Aye, aye!" added Capt. Ichabod, "there's another one we're after; where's the runaway Sir Nightcap?"

"Alas!" said Dickory, "I do not know. I escaped from Blackbeard, and since that day have heard nothing. I had supposed that Capt. Bonnet was in your company, Mr. Delaplaine."

Now the captain of the Black Swan pushed himself forward. "Is it Capt. Bonnet, lately of the pirate ship Revenge, that you're talking about?" he asked. "If so, I may tell you something about him. I am lately from Charles Town, and the talk there was that Blackbeard was lying outside the harbor in Stede Bonnet's old vessel, and that Bonnet had lately joined him. I did not venture out of port until I had had certain news that these pirates had sailed northward. They had two or three ships, and the talk was that they were bound for the Virginias, and perhaps still farther north. They were fitted for a long cruise."

"Gone again!" exclaimed Mr. Delaplaine in a hoarse voice. "Gone again!"

Capt. Ichabod's face grew clouded. "Gone north of Charles Town," he exclaimed, "that's bad, be-dad, that's very bad. You are sure he did not sail southward?" he asked of the captain of the brig.

That gruff mariner was in a strange state of mind. He had just been captured by a pirate, and in the next moment had made, what might be a very profitable sale, to a respectable merchant, of the goods the pirate was about to take from him. Moreover the said pirate seemed to be in the employ of said merchant, and altogether things seemed to him to be in as fearsome a mix as they had seemed to Capt. Ichabod, but he brought his mind down to the question he had been asked.

"No doubt about that," said he; "there were some of his men in the town—for they were afraid of nobody—and they were not backward in talking."

"That upsets things badly," said Capt. Ichabod, without unclenching his brow. "With my slow vessel and my empty purse, be-dad, I don't see how I am ever going to catch Blackbeard if he has gone north. Finding Blackbeard would have been a handful of trumps to me, but the game seems to be up, be-dad."

The captain of the brig and Ichabod's quartermaster went away to attend to the transfer of the needed goods to the Restless. Mander, with his wife and little daughter, were standing together gazing with amazement at the strange pirates who had come aboard, while Lucilla stepped up to Dickory, who stood silent, with his eyes on the deck.

"Can you tell me what this means?" said she.

For a moment he did not answer, and then he said: "I don't know everything myself, but I must presently go on board that vessel."

"What!" exclaimed Lucilla, stepping back. "Is she there?"

"Yes," said Dickory.

CHAPTER XXIX.

DICKORY FINDS HIS MOTHER.

THE sea was smooth and the wind light, and the transfer of provisions from the Black Swan to the pirate sloop, which two ships now lay as near each other as safety would permit, was accomplished quietly.

During the progress of the transfer Capt. Ichabod's boat was rowed back to his ship, and its arrival was watched with great interest by everybody on board that pirate sloop. Kate and Dame Charter, as well as all the men who stood looking over the rail, were amazed to see a naval officer accompanying the captain and Mr. Delaplaine on their return. But that amazement was greatly increased when that officer, as soon as he set foot upon the deck, removed his hat and made directly for Dame Charter, who, with a scream loud enough to frighten the fishes, enfolded him in her arms and straightway fainted. It was like a son coming up out of the sea, sure enough, as she afterward stated. Kate, recognizing Dickory, hurried to him with a scream of her own and both hands outstretched.

"Is my father dead?" she gasped. "Not that I know of," said Dickory. "Where is he?" she cried.

"I do not know," was the answer. She stood, while Dickory returned to his mother. Mr. Delaplaine saw her standing thus, pale and shocked, but he did not hasten to her. He had said things to say to her, for his practical mind told him that it would not be possible to continue the search for her father, he having put himself out of the reach of Capt. Ichabod and his inefficient sloop. If Dickory had said anything about her father which had so cast her down, how much harder would it be for him when he had to tell her the whole truth.

Over and over again Dickory told his tale to his mother. She interrupted him so much with her embraces that he could not explain things clearly to her, but she did not care, she had him with her. He was with her, and she had fast hold of him, and she would never let go again. What mattered it what sort of clothes he wore, or where he had escaped from—a family on a desert island or from a pirate crew? She had him, and her happiness knew no bounds.

The boats piled steadily between the two vessels, and on one of the trips Mr. Delaplaine went over to the brig on business, and also glad to escape for a little the dreaded interview which must soon come between himself and his niece.

"Now, sir," said the merchant to the captain of the brig, "you will make a bill against me for the provisions which are being taken to that pirate, but I hope you have reserved a sufficient store of food for your own maintenance until you reach a port, and that of myself and two women who wish to sail with you, craving most earnestly that you will land us in Jamaica or in some place convenient of access to that island."

"Which I can do," said the captain, "for I am bound for Kingston; and as to subsistence, shall have plenty."

On the brig Mr. Delaplaine found Capt. Ichabod, who had come over to superintend operations, and who was now talking to the pretty girl who had asked him by the arm when he was about to slay the naval officer.

"I would talk with you, captain," said the merchant, "on a matter of immediate import." And he led the pirate away from the pretty girl.

"The matter to be discussed was, indeed, of deep import."

"I am loath to say it, sir," said Mr. Delaplaine, "when I think of the hospitality and most exceptional kindness with which you have treated me and my niece, and for which we shall feel grateful all our lives, but I think you will agree with me that it would be useless for us to pursue the search after that most reprehensible person, my brother-in-law, Bonnet. There can be no doubt, I believe, that he and Blackbeard have left the vicinity of Charles Town, and have gone, we know not where."

"No doubt of that, be-dad," said Ichabod, knitting his brows as he spoke. "If Blackbeard had been outside the harbor, this brig would not have been here."

"And, therefore, sir," continued Mr. Delaplaine, "I have judged it to be wise, and indeed necessary, for us to part company with you, sir, and take passage on this brig, which, by a most fortunate chance, is bound for Kingston."

"I don't like to agree with you," said the captain, "but, be-dad, I am bound to do it. I am disappointed myself, sir, but I have been disappointed so often that I suppose I ought to be used to it. If I had caught up with Blackbeard I should have been all right, and after I had settled your affairs—and I know I could have done that—I think I would have joined him. But all I can do now is to hammer along at the business, take prizes in the usual way, and wait for Blackbeard to come south again, and then I'll either sell out or join him."

"It's a great pity, sir," said Mr. Delaplaine, "a great pity—"

"Yes, it is," interrupted Ichabod. "It's a very great pity, sir, a very great pity. If I had known more about ships when I bought the Restless I would have had a faster craft, and by this time might have been a man of comfortable means. But that sloop over there, be-dad, is so slow, that many a time, sir, I have seen a fat merchantman sail away from her and leave us, in spite of our guns, cursing and swearing, miles behind. I am sorry to have you leave, sir, and with your ladies; but, as you say, here's your chance to get home, and I don't know when I could give you another."

Mr. Delaplaine replied courteously and gratefully, and by the next boat he went back to the Restless. Capt. Ichabod, his brow still clouded by the approaching separation, walked over to Lucilla and continued his conversation with her about the island of Barbadoes, a subject of which he knew very little and she nothing.

It was not long after this conversation that the largest boat belonging to the Restless was rowed over to the brig, and in it sat not only Kate, Dame Charter and Dickory, but Capt. Ichabod, who would accompany his guests to take proper leave of them. The crew of the pirate sloop crowded themselves along her sides, and even mounted into her shrouds, waving their hats and shouting as the boat moved away.

Lucilla watched carefully the newcomers as they ascended to the deck of the Black Swan. "That is the girl," she said to herself, "and I am not surprised."

A little later she remarked to Capt. Ichabod, who sat by her: "Are they mother and daughter, those two?"

"Oh, no," said he. "Miss Bonnet is too fine a lady and too beautiful to be daughter to that old woman, who is her attendant and the mother of the young fellow in the cocked hat."

"Too fine and beautiful!" repeated Lucilla.

"I greatly grieve to leave you all," continued the young pirate captain, "although some of you I have known so short a time. It will be very lonely when I sail away with none to speak to save the bloody dogs I command, who may yet throttle me. And it is to Barbadoes you go to settle with your family?"

"That is our destination," said Lucilla, "but I know not if we shall find the money to settle there; we were taken by pirates and lost everything."

All the good-bys had been said and good wishes had been wished, when, just as he was about to descend to his boat, Capt. Ichabod turned to Lucilla. "And it is truly to Barbadoes you go?" he asked.

"Yes," said she, "I think we shall certainly do that."

Now his face flushed. "And do you care for that fellow in the cocked hat?" Here was a cruel situation for poor Lucilla. She must lie or lose two men. She might lose them anyway, but she would not do it of her own free will, and so she lied.

"Not a whit!" said Lucilla. The eyes of Ichabod brightened as he went down the side of the brig. (CONTINUED IN NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE.)

Occasionally life itself is the price of a mistake but you'll never be wrong if you take Dr. King's New Life Pills for Dyspepsia, Dizziness, Headache, Liver and Bowel troubles. They are gentle yet thorough. 25c. at Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro's drug store.

Lightning's Bolts Brands Tree's Photograph on Victim.

Thomas Burke, of No. 15 Crawford street, Jersey City Heights, was struck and killed by lightning while standing for shelter from the storm under a tree in front of 245 Summit avenue, Jersey city, says the New York American.

When Dr. Boyd, of Summit avenue and Montgomery street, and others reached Burke's side, immediately after they saw Burke fall, he was already dead. On his cheek was an exact photograph, two and one-half inches long by one inch wide, of the tree under which Burke lay, trunk and branches being reproduced with fidelity. The man's derby hat was torn into strips, but beyond this and the death picture on the cheek, there was no sign to tell how he was killed.

Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., Asks the readers of this paper to test the value of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Those persons who have been cured by it do not hesitate to recommend it to their friends. Kodol digests what you eat, cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Increases strength by enabling the stomach and digestive organs to contribute to the blood all of the nutriment contained in the food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is pleasant and palatable.

Chill for Bryan. The following story is going the rounds among insurance men in this city, says the New York Herald.

In applying for some additional life insurance recently, Mr. William Jennings Bryan had to fill up the usual questions as printed on the application sheet.

One query was: "Have you ever suffered from fever of any kind?"

To this Mr. Bryan replied: "Yes, from two attacks of Presidential fever, both of which were followed by severe chills. Have completely recovered."

A Frightened Horse. Running like mad down the street dumping the occupants, or a hundred other accidents, are every day occurrences. It behooves everybody to have a reliable Salve handy and there is none as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, Burns, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Piles, disappear quickly under its soothing effect. 25c. at Z. A Queer Chap. "Snedeker always was a queer chap."

"What has he done now?"

"After being defeated at the polls the other day he didn't turn around and say he was glad of it, because he would now have a chance to go on quietly attending to his own affairs while the other fellow was having all the trouble."

Revolution Imminent. A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upset. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the Kidneys and Bowels, stimulate the Liver, and clarify the blood. Run down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it don't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., druggist.

ASTONISHING

Magnetic Power Developed By a Girl of Twelve.

[St. Petersburg (Our Chicago Chronicle)]

An account of a phenomenon observed in a girl of twelve residing at Vladikavkas, in the Caucasus has been communicated to the Novoe Vremya.

The girl is a daughter of a workman named Lubka. It is stated that every object which she approaches begins to move. If she goes near a dresser with plates upon it they begin to dance, washing hung on a line flies off it, a bottle standing on a table is raised in the air and, falling down, is broken in pieces, and stones lying on the ground leap in the air and fall again.

The girl is perfectly healthy and laughs at the occurrences called forth on her appearance. No one can explain them, although a number of doctors and professors of physical science have been consulted.

The child's parents are very poor and wish to send her out to domestic service, but she always loses her places owing to the assertion of ignorant people that she is possessed of a devil and that she should be sent to Father John, of Cronstadt, in St. Petersburg, to have the demon exorcised.

At present the means are being collected to bring the child to St. Petersburg for her marvelous magnetic powers to be examined by medical authorities.

During the Russian Lent, when it rained heavily for several days in succession, those in the house with the girl were greatly surprised to see water constantly pouring on her head and shoulders, which were always wet, so that she could hardly find time to dry herself.

When the weather became finer the weird manifestations changed their character. Things began to fly about the house and dozens of glasses and plates were broken.

Once while the girl was sitting with a child in her arms, various objects, such as blankets and pillows, flew out of the hassinet, which was standing about five feet away. They moved, however, in the direction opposite to that in which the girl was sitting.

On another occasion, as she was approaching a sideboard, a glass of oil on the top shelf, which she could not reach, spilled itself on her. It has been noticed that not only glass and metal but such things as India rubber boots jump into the air at her approach.

The correspondent adds: "The phenomena I have described were all so witnessed by me in my own house."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other disease put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It acts directly on the blood and mucus surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Gould as a Telegraph.

George J. Gould numbers among his other side accomplishments that of telegraphy. He learned the meaning of the dots and dashes when a boy in his father's office, and if he had to earn his living he would be a fairly good telegrapher.

The expert telegrapher at the other end of the broker's wire over which Mr. Gould sends his messages told him recently, "You're now able to hold down a key at about thirty a month." And Mr. Gould flashed back this answer: "Do you know of a job that's open at that figure?"

A private wire connects Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J., with Mr. Gould's Broadway office, and as Mrs. Gould also understands telegraphy, the two call up each other many times during the course of a day.

Fight Will be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall, of Beall, Miss., says: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once and four bottles entirely cured her. Guaranteed by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., druggists. Price 50c, and $1.00. Trial bottles free."

Paradoxical Woman again.

"I can't understand them at all," complained the white-bearded philosopher, muttering into his whiskers and shaking his head dolefully. "What can't you understand?" ask the man with the pickle nose. "Women. Now, my dear daughter has had to buy an automobile habit, and seems perfectly satisfied to wear it, although everybody knows she has not the automobile habit." "She has it and she hasn't it," mused the pickle-nosed man. "That is the answer. If you knew women as well as I do you'd know those were the facts in the case."

Useless Fruit.

Among the useless fruit borne by the tree of knowledge may be mentioned:

The agnostic who knows too much to know anything for a certainty.

The "sport" who knows only how to look knowing.

The "criminally insane" person who knows that he can get off because he didn't know any better.

The youth who knows more at fifteen than his father at fifty.

The man who knows how to make such good excuses that he needs to know nothing else.

The scholar who knows a great deal, but knows not how to use his knowledge.

The society lad who knows how to look so charmingly free from all knowledge.

The "gentleman" who knows that his father's money supplies the place of knowledge in his place.

The tramp who knows that society owes him a living, but knows not how to collect it.

The office-seeker who knows that

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers. They filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It is used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle by mail. Write to Swamp-Root, free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Missing $10,000 Bill.

Nearly fifteen years ago a man entered the First National Bank of Denver and walked into the office of David H. Moffatt, the president of the bank. He had a bottle in his hand that he said contained nitroglycerine and threatened to blow up the bank unless he was given a large sum of money. Mr. Moffatt sent for the money and among the bills was one of $10,000 denomination. Recently the Government called in all $10,000 bills and the one given by Mr. Moffatt is the only one that has not been presented for redemption. No trace of the man who got the money was ever found.

Had to be Fair.

There was told in Milwaukee at the time of the Wisconsin Democratic Convention that money was being handed out.

A follower of Mayor David B. Rose came to Rose and said: "Dave, one of my boys told me last night the opposition were giving out the yellow ones down the street a bit."

"Yes," Rose replied tentatively.

"Yes, and it was true too."

"Well, what did you do?"

"Why, I had to be fair. I told him to go to the villains and get all he could and split with me."

True Neighborly Spirit.

The new Bishop Coadjutor of Albany, the Rev. R. H. Nelson, wished to indicate in a recent address the spirit of friendliness and helpfulness that should exist between neighbors.

"Too many neighbors," Mr. Nelson said, "resemble a physician and a lawyer who use to live next door to one another in historic Germantown."

"The physician one day asked if he might borrow from a lawyer his edition of Florio's Montaigne."

"You are welcome to read the work in my library," the lawyer answered, "but you can't take it away with you, I am sorry to say, for I have lost so many hooks through lending them that I have sworn never to let another volume leave my house."

"The physician thanked the lawyer, but of course did not attempt to get through so ponderous a work as 'Montaigne' in the other's library."

"A week passed, and the lawyer came and asked the physician for the loan of his lawn mower."

"I am only too glad to lend you my lawn mower," said the physician, "though it is my rule never to let it leave my lawn. There, however, you may use it all you please."

Easily Explained.

[New York Times.] "What did you say was the trouble with my old man's stomach?" asked an old colored woman of the doctor who had been called in to prescribe for her husband.

"I said," replied the doctor, "that the most annoying symptom seems to be water brash or pyrosis, as we doctors call it. He must be more careful regarding the food he eats."

"Dat am just what am the mattah with him—periosis," said she. "He's the biggest han' for pie you ever see. He eats most three pieces every meal. It surely am periosis he am suffering with."

For a Sore Corn.

Rubbing with a little oil of pepper-mint, it is said, will give great relief.

FOR RIDING THE GOAT.

Kansas Man Sues For Injuries Sustained in a Lodge.

Wichita, Kan., June 23.—S. B. Phipps has ridden the goat in the Improved Order of Red Men here and his bill as a jockey is $2,825.

He filed his suit here this week asking damage in the sum named. He alleges injuries received in an initiation last February.

The defendants are Fred Young, Charles Reece, Charles Wagner, William Walk, Olive Martin and Henry Schnitzler.

According to the complaint of Phipps he was taken into the local tribe and was given, besides the regular work a side degree. He declares that he trusted implicitly in the men who had charge of the work, and did everything that they told him to do without so much as questioning the advisability of it.

While he was being given this degree—the Haymakers' degree—he was put astride of a "wooden object," he says and was told to hang on tight, and not to let go his hold under any consideration or on any provocation. Then the "wooden object" was worked backward and forward, up and down, in a most violent manner, until the candidate was most uncomfortable. The game wound up by his falling to the floor. He struck his face and injured his head, neck, nose, shoulders and back all at one and the same time. Since then he has been sick, sore, maimed, disordered, and has suffered great pain.

Mr. Phipps bases his claim for damages upon the fact that it requires at least six men to conter the Haymaker degree of the Red Men in a safe and proper manner. In his case, he says, the defendants were guilty of negligence in that they sent but four men to manage the affair. The inference is drawn that the goat was a particular vicious one, and that while four men might handle it when it had been worked hard, yet when it was feeling good two more were needed.

In Memory

Of Lena Viola Sullenger, who departed this life June 18th, 1904. She was one of those beautiful quiet christian character's that makes this world brighter and better by living in it. She suffered many long months but in all her afflictions she was perfectly resigned to God's will. Her last days on earth were like a beautiful star, seemingly to shine brighter before she faded here to shine in the glory world. A few hours before her departure, although very weak, she sang that song of songs, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and the beautiful words, as they floated out on evening air, were as soft and gentle as the touch on angel, we shall miss her here but in the great beyond, we shall meet where farewells are not spoken. Sister Sullenger was an obedient dutiful child, a faithful loving wife, a patient kind gentle loving mother.

She leaves this side the river of death, a mother, two sisters, three brothers, a husband and three children. Her father and three sisters had preceded her to the glory world. How sweet it is, and what consolation to those left behind. "That they sorrow not as others sorrow who have no hope." May the protecting hand of God hover over those motherless children, may His all seeing eyes guide them until at last they strike mother's hand on the golden shore. And the bereaved husband, God help him to feel the responsibility resting upon him. May God's grace be given him in such a measure as to enable him to live so that he, with his wife and children may at last be an unbroken family in that beautiful world of light, and to her mother, sister Barnett, you will not have to tarry long on their side, for you brush the dew on Jordan's bank the crossing must be near. You shall meet again those you have loved and lost a while. Sisters and brothers meet her where the surge ceases to roll. Sister Sullenger's life hardly had reached the hilltop before the sun set. Born September 29th, 1851, died June 13th, 1904, aged 35 years, 8 months, 15 days. May we die the death of the righteous and may our end be like hers. Another soul redeemed from death and sin. And as from earth the spirit passed away to dwell forever in the realms of day. Those who were left to mourn could almost hear the strains of heavenly music strike the ear. And to their longing eyes by grace was given. In such a scene, as 'twere a glimpse of heaven. J. W. C.
